HISTORY OF CABLES:

Cables End "Pizza Pasta Wine & Spirits" opened its doors to Greeley in 1972. A pizza restaurant was to be built next to a power station near the end of some large power line cables—hence the name Cables End. The power line motif using cables spools as tables created a unique atmosphere with charm. Cables homemade pizza and thick-cut spaghetti recipes created by Mama Lucille Cito were so popular an expansion in 1976 was needed. Operations manager Keith Johnson, a native from New York, purchased Cables in 1979, he added a bar and lounge to the restaurant with live music to entertain in 1980. The menu was expanded to create a full-service Italian eatery with all homemade pastas and sauces. The steady increased customer base created a need for another expansion with no room at its current site. Johnson built a new Cables End Italian Grille on the corner of Thirty-eighth Avenue and Tenth Street in 1986. He patterned the same recipe for success with cable spools for tables and made from scratch Italian favorites.

The long time Greeley restaurant thrived for many years then in 2004 Johnson sold the landmark building to create an updated Cables concept. After two years Cables Pub & Grill reopened in 2006 on the corner of Fifty-ninth Avenue and Twentieth Street to the delight of many with the same popular great food and drink, living up to the company slogan:

"Where Friends Meet"

Now serving three locations in Northern Colorado: Greeley (1972), Fort Morgan (1996) and Estes Park (2013)!
